The current consultation relies on the public, firstly seeing that there is a consultation in progress, and secondly being able to respond to it. The paperwork associated with the proposals is wordy and complex and needs to be properly summarised. Cllr Bundy has stated 'we have committed to making this process as transparent and accessible as possible', but as currently constructed it is neither of those things and appears designed to confuse. This process should be managed independently and the consultation delivered to each and every household in the borough. As currently constructed, this consultation is not worth the paper it is not written upon. Clearly it is the hope of the council that there will be minimal representation.
