This plan strikes me as an attempt by test valley to look good and achieve planning objectives by passing the problems associated with the plan to somebody else.

There is no way that the traffic associated with the building of these house can be dealt with the current road structure, there is nowhere to build new roads which will eventually not cause major disruption to either temples way, or the main road into Southampton. The Asda roundabout is already at major problem area, and there will be no easy access to the motorways which are not already overused.

The current doctors and dentists within the area are already at breaking point, so unless the plan will include properly manned full medical facilities again it is passing the problem to somebody else. Schools will be a similar issue with no local secondary schools near the site and already at full capacity.

You build 1000 homes where will you get 1000 minimum jobs from without people further causing problems within the immediate area.

I totally oppose this plan which seems to disregard the quality of life for people already living in the area and because of the current infrastructure eventually greates a much lower standard of living for everybody in the area.
