Though I acknowledge the need for more housing, I am concerned overall by the fact that the housing development will put extra strain on neighbouring infrastructure. Such as roads, increasing congestion to the motorway routes, and increasing air pollution for the current residents along those areas caused by a greater number of petrol/diesel cars.

There will also be the problem of rainwater runoff. With the building of houses there will be increased run off into Monks Brook. Climate change is causing more and more unusual weather events, which appear to be increasing the flooding risks in these local rivers. Current Velmore farm , as a farm helps mitigate these risks. Once built on, the runoff will impact the local rivers and will cause more frequent flooding, affecting housing that lies outside TVBC. Not only must any plans take into consideration climate change, but must include a large amount of engineering leeway to deal with the what appears to be increasing frequency of unusual events.
